

Junko (june-co) is a children's musician, singer-songwriter, worship leader, and author/speaker who grew up in Osaka, Japan, and is now based in Southern California. Starting out as a featured vocalist on NHK television in Tokyo during college, this bilingual singer's performances have since taken her all over the world. She has shared the stage with artists such as Michael W. Smith, Mark Schultz, and Avalon and with speakers such as John Townsend, Rick Warren and Tony Campolo. Her songs have been featured on Worship Leader Magazine's SongDiscovery CD, and she is currently a worship leader at Saddleback Church in Lake Forest, CA.

Junko is proud to be an Artist Associate with World Vision and has helped acquire over 1500 sponsors for children around the world. You're likely to find Junko singing at MOPS groups or doing a family concert at churches when she is not busy at home with her husband David and their two school-aged children, Joshua and Megumi.
